SDR & AE Demo Handoff SOP

Purpose: Create a consistent SDR → AE handoff process that:

- Allows prospects to put face to name with SDR whose been doing the outreach
- Show cohesion between SDR's/AE's, thus improving the prospect experience
- gives AE's opportunity to gain better context and insight from SDR around conversations with prospects before going into demos and
- Eliminates the SDR stress if a prospect joins the call or not and allows for immediate follow-up when a prospect does not attend.

1. Why Are We Introducing This?

Going forward, SDRs should plan to join the demos they set whenever possible.

The SDR's role is to provide a clean handoff, give the AE context, and help ensure the meeting starts smoothly by staying on until the prospect joins and handoff is complete.

This process is designed to solve these key issues:

Better SDR → AE Handoff

The SDR has often had the most recent conversation with the prospect and understands why they agreed to meet.

Rather than relying entirely on HubSpot notes, the SDR can quickly communicate:

- What prompted the prospect to take the meeting
- Their biggest priorities or challenges
- Current software/provider
- What they are hoping to accomplish
- Any important context or objections
- Who else may be involved in the decision

This gives the AE a much stronger starting point.

SDRs should no longer have to rely on an AE checking the “did they join?” box in HubSpot to determine whether a prospect attended.

If the SDR is on the meeting, they know immediately whether the prospect:

- Joined
- Was late
- No-showed
- Cancelled
- Had an issue joining

This creates much clearer ownership, visibility, and cuts down the communication loop between SDR and AE.

Faster No-Show Follow-Up

If a prospect doesn't show, the SDR can immediately take action.

Instead of waiting for an AE to slack them, update HubSpot or follow up, the SDR can begin calling the prospect while the meeting is still fresh.

The goal: turn a no-show into a live conversation whenever possible.

---

2. The SDR→ AE Ideal Workflow

Before the Meeting

SDR

→ Qualifies and books meeting

At the Start of the Meeting

SDR

→ Welcomes prospect

During the Meeting

AE

→ Leads discovery

If Prospect No-Shows

SDR

→ Waits a few minutes → Calls/emails/SMS (if mobile number is known)

3. The SDR's Role in the Meeting

The SDR's primary responsibilities are:

1. Join the meeting on time.
2. Introduce the prospect to the AE.
3. Provide a concise handoff.
4. Confirm the prospect's priorities.
5. Transition ownership to the AE.
6. If the prospect does not attend, immediately begin follow-up.

Think of the SDR as the bridge between the prospect and the AE.

4. Professionalism & Meeting Presence

When an SDR joins a scheduled demo, they are representing Momence, even though they are not running the meeting.

The prospect should experience a seamless transition from the SDR who booked the meeting to the AE who is running the demo. How we show up on camera is part of that experience.

Dress Like You’re Joining a Customer Meeting

SDRs should be dressed appropriately for a professional customer-facing video call.

Avoid:

- Tank tops
- Pajamas or sleepwear
- Clothing with offensive or distracting graphics
- Anything that would not be appropriate for a customer-facing meeting

You don't need to be overly formal, but you should look like you're ready to meet with a prospective customer.

Have a Professional Background

The environment you join from matters.

Avoid:

- Dark rooms
- Sitting on a couch
- Joining from bed
- Messy or distracting backgrounds
- Poor lighting
- Noisy environments
- Situations where you appear unprepared or distracted

Whenever possible, join from a well-lit, quiet, professional environment with your camera positioned at eye level.

The Simple Standard

If you wouldn't want the prospect seeing it during a meeting you were running yourself, don't join the demo from there.

The SDR's presence should communicate:

> "I was prepared for this meeting, I care about this prospect, and I take their time seriously."

5. The 30-Second Handoff

The handoff should be short and conversational.

A strong handoff should answer:

> Why are they here, what do they care about, and what should the AE know?

Recommended Framework

"Hey [Prospect], thanks again for making the time. I have [AE] here with me today.

When we spoke, you mentioned [priority/problem], and you were particularly interested in [specific area]. You're currently using [current software/process], and you were hoping to learn more about how we could help with [goal].

I'll let [AE] take it from here but it was great to meet you!"

The SDR should then let the AE take over.

Example

> "Hey Rachel, thanks again for making the time. I have Sam, one of our AEs, here with me today. When we spoke, you mentioned that you're currently using Mindbody and are frustrated with the amount of manual work around client communication and marketing. You were particularly interested in seeing how Momence handles those pieces and whether it could simplify things for your team. I'll let Sam take it from here, but it was great to meet you!"

Keep it concise.

The handoff should generally take 30–60 seconds, not five minutes.

6. What Should the SDR Know Before the Demo?

Before joining the meeting, the SDR should be able to answer:

Prospect

- Who are we meeting with?
- What is their role?
- What type of business do they operate?
- How many locations?
- What vertical are they in?

Current Situation

- What software are they currently using?
- Why did they agree to speak with Momence?
- What problem or opportunity did they mention?
- Have they looked at Momence before?

Priorities

Identify the 1–3 things that matter most to the prospect through discovery on the booking call.

Examples:

- Reducing administrative work
- Improving marketing
- Replacing Mindbody
- Better client communication
- Increasing retention
- Improving reporting
- Managing multiple locations
- Dance-specific functionality
- Better booking experience
- Payment processing
- Mobile app
- Lead management

Buying Context

If known:

- Who makes the decision?
- Is anyone else involved?
- Are they actively evaluating alternatives?
- Is there a timeline?
- What prompted them to look now?

7. How SDRs Join the Meeting Invite

Once a demo is booked, the SDR is responsible for making sure they are included on the calendar invite.

The process depends on how the meeting was booked:

If the SDR Books the Meeting on the Phone

When using the HubSpot booking flow:

- Add yourself as a guest to the meeting.
- Confirm that you are included on the calendar invite.
- Make sure you have the meeting on your calendar before moving on.

Goal: The SDR should automatically be included on any meeting they personally book over the phone.

If the Meeting Is Booked via Email or Inbound

If the prospect books through an email conversation, inbound request, website form, or another source where the SDR is not automatically added:

- Ping the AE and ask them to add you to the calendar invite.
- Confirm that you have received the invite.
- Add the meeting to your calendar if necessary.

Example Slack message:

> "Hey [AE], [Prospect] booked for [Day/Time]. Can you add me to the invite? I'd like to join for the handoff."

The Rule

If you set the meeting, you should be on the meeting.

The SDR should not wait until the day of the demo to realize they aren't on the invite.

Taking ownership of the calendar invite is part of taking ownership of the meeting.

Pre-Meeting Checklist

Before a scheduled demo, the SDR should be able to check all of the following:

- I'm on the calendar invite
- I know who I'm meeting with
- I know why they agreed to meet
- I know their top 1–3 priorities
- I know their current software/process
- I've added relevant context to HubSpot
- I know which AE is running the demo
- I know the meeting time and have it on my calendar

8. What NOT to Do

SDR attendance should improve the handoff, not create additional friction.

Don't Re-Pitch Momence

The prospect already agreed to meet.

No need to give another two-minute Momence pitch before handing things over.

Don't Take Over the Demo

Once the handoff is complete, let the AE lead and you are free to jump off the call.

Don't Repeat Information the Prospect Already Gave

Avoid asking questions the prospect has already answered during the SDR conversation unless there is a reason to clarify something.

9. What Happens When the Prospect No-Shows?

This is one of the biggest advantages of the new process.

If the prospect does not join the scheduled meeting:

SDR Process

1. Give the prospect a few minutes to join.

Don't immediately assume the meeting is a no-show.

2. Call the prospect.

Use the phone as the primary follow-up whenever possible.

Example:

> "Hey [Name], it's [SDR] from Momence. We had you scheduled to meet with us right now. Just wanted to make sure you didn't have any trouble getting into the meeting."

3. If they answer:

Try to get them into the meeting immediately.

> "No worries at all. We've got [AE] here and can still jump on whenever you're ready."

4. If they don't answer:

Leave a voicemail if appropriate and send a short follow-up.

5. If they don’t join, add to the no show process.

Don't simply mark the meeting as a no-show and move on. Continue to follow up in an effort to rebook.

10. No-Show Follow-Up Priority

A no-show should be treated as an active sales opportunity, not a dead lead.

Priority Order

1. Call immediately

↓

2. Attempt to get them onto the existing meeting

↓

3. If unsuccessful, send a short follow-up via email or SMS (if already established SMS as part of outreach)

↓

4. Continue calling according to the appropriate follow-up cadence

The faster we respond, the more likely we are to recover the meeting.

11. SDR + AE Responsibilities

Activity	SDR	AE
Book meeting	✅ Own
Capture prospect priorities	✅ Own
Add relevant HubSpot notes	✅ Own
Join scheduled demo	✅ Own	✅ Own
Provide handoff	✅ Own	Support
Run demo		✅ Own
Discovery		✅ Own

Handle product questions		✅ Own
No-show immediate call	✅ Own	Support
Reschedule no-show	✅ Own	Support
Update opportunity/deal		✅ Own
Follow-up after completed demo		✅ Own

Key principle:

> The SDR owns the meeting until the handoff is complete. The AE owns the opportunity once the meeting begins.

12. HubSpot Expectations

HubSpot should remain the source of truth for meeting and prospect information.

Before the meeting, SDRs should make sure the AE can easily find:

- SDR notes consisting of:
  - Prospect's reason for meeting
  - Current software
  - Key priorities
  - Relevant pain points
  - Important qualification information
  - Any commitments made during the booking conversation

Important

The SDR should not rely on the AE checking a box to determine whether the prospect attended.

By joining the meeting, the SDR has direct visibility into attendance.

HubSpot should still be updated appropriately, but the new process removes the dependency on an AE remembering to communicate attendance of prospect to SDR, while preparing for demo.

13. Best Practices

DO

- Join your demos whenever possible.
- Be on the call before the prospect.
- Know why the prospect agreed to meet.
- Know their top priorities.
- Give the AE a concise handoff.
- Let the AE take ownership.
- Immediately call no-shows.
- Treat no-shows as recoverable opportunities.

DON'T

- Re-pitch the entire company.
- Repeat the SDR discovery word-for-word.
- Over-explain the prospect's situation.
- Make the prospect repeat information.
- Wait for the AE to tell you a prospect no-showed.
- Assume a no-show is a lost opportunity.

14. The Standard We Are Building

The goal is to create a seamless experience for both the prospect and the sales team.

From the prospect's perspective, it should feel like:

> "The SDR understood what I needed, communicated that to the AE, and now I'm speaking with someone who already understands why I'm here."

From the AE's perspective:

> "I know exactly why this person took the meeting and what matters to them before I start."

From the SDR's perspective:

> "I know whether they showed, and if they didn't, I can immediately take action."

The Standard

Book → Prepare → Join → Handoff → Support → Follow Up

Will delete this tab before distribution to the teams

Clarifying points still to add:

- show up to the ones that matter the most, with the purpose of:
    - Showing brand alignment
    - rapport building between teams

If there's a conflict (i.e. internal meetings)

- need to let manager know they won't be able to make it and it's up to them to catch themselves up

Mandatory that SDR's show for their demos they book unless:

- multiple booked at the same time
    - Prioritize best opp- use best judgement
- outside of SDR working hours
